Austin, TX—January 19, 2023—Austin City Limits (ACL) presents a Season 48 highlight with the first solo appearance of Grammy-winning producer/musician/bandleader Adrian Quesada, returning to the ACL stage to bring to life his acclaimed Spanish-language album, Boleros Psicodélicos, a love letter to the psychedelic Latin love songs or “baladas” of the 60s and 70s, which landed on many 2022 year-end best lists including Rolling Stone, NPR, Variety, Billboard and more. Quesada performs with a nine-piece band joined by a hit parade of international guest vocalists from across the spectrum of contemporary Latin music, including Puerto Rico’s iconic iLe, Argentina’s Natalia Clavier, Mexico City’s Girl Ultra and Guatemala’s Tita. The new episode premieres January 21 at 7pm CT/8pm ET on PBS. The Peabody Award-winning program, recorded live at ACL’s studio home in Austin, Texas, continues its extraordinary run as the longest-running music television show in history. ACL gives viewers a front-row seat to the best in live performance as this American music institution nears its remarkable half-century milestone. ACL airs weekly on PBS stations nationwide (check local listings) and full episodes are made available to stream online at pbs.org/austincitylimits following the initial broadcast. Multi-hyphenate and prolific multi-instrumentalist Adrian Quesada is known for his epic collaborations including the famed soul duo Black Pumas and Latin funk orchestra Grupo Fantasma. In a dazzling hour, restless creative Quesada returns with a labor of love, Boleros Psicodélicos, pouring his passion for the art form into an original tribute recreating the world of psychedelic Latin love songs with a set of Spanish-language gems of heartbreak, love and longing. The rare performance marks only the second time this music has been performed live, and Quesada is joined by multiple collaborators, eight of Latin music’s brightest stars, many hailing from Central and South America. These luminous performances celebrate the golden era of romantic bolero music and the psychedelic baladas that flourished beginning in the late 1960s, when Latin love songs began to sound even more grandiose than usual, bordering on the delirious.

With Quesada on lead guitar, accompanied by an ace band featuring string section, harpsichord and horns, the bandleader takes viewers on a journey of Boleros Psicodélicos, which features a mix of classics and new originals. Quesada welcomes guest vocalist Mireya Ramos, the leader of New York's all-female mariachi Flor de Toloache, for "Tus Tormentas," a ballad with a laidback hip-hop backbeat and impassioned vocals and violin from Ramos. Mexican-American singer Rudy De Anda takes the stage for the swaying, melodramatic bossa nova "El León." Mexico City's sultry Latin R&B singer Girl Ultra wows with velvety vocals on the stunning original ballad "El Payaso," featuring a ringing vibraphone coda. Quesada welcomes magnetic singer Angélica Garcia for a soaring pair of songs, the opulent "Puedes Decir De Mi," from the catalog of Cuban superstar La Lupe and the sweeping, sensual original song "Ídolo." Carrying a colorful paraguas (umbrella), Monterrey, Mexico-to-Austin vocalist Clemente Castillo joins the band for "El Paraguas," an acid-tinged ballad in waltz time featuring a dynamic Quesada guitar solo. Quesada introduces Argentinian singer and Thievery Corporation vocalist Natalia Clavier, who wows with her rendition of the boleros "Esclavo y Amo," a drama-filled 1975 hit by the Peruvian combo Los Pasteles Verdes, and the song that first got Quesada hooked on the genre. Clavier delivers a sprightly, synth-frosted, rock-accented "¡Adios!" before leaving the stage to wild applause. Rising young Guatemalan singer Tita takes centerstage to perform the sentimental, seductive balada gem "El Muchacho De Los Ojos Tristes," a cover of Spanish singer Jeanette's 1982 hit and a crowd favorite.

The hour closes with the final guest and collaborator, iLe, former frontwoman of Puerto Rican powerhouse group Calle 13. The iconic singer takes the stage in a dazzling emerald green dress to perform a pair of highlights, including a stirring take on Cuban singer and queen of bolero Olga Guillot's 1967 hit ballad "Bravo" before closing the show with the opening track on Boleros Psicodélicos, "Mentiras Con Cariño," featuring the return of Mireya Ramos with an emotional violin solo to rapturous applause.

"Honestly, this is one of the most beautifully staged and emotionally charged shows we've ever presented," said ACL executive producer Terry Lickona. "With Latin music's popularity exploding around the globe, Austin's own Adrian Quesada has curated a unique mix of singers reimagining one of the most classic genres of Latin music - the bolero. It's a mesmerizing hour!"
